Appeals Court Ignores SCOTUS Wine Ruling

A lower court has floundered in the face of last year's Supreme Court decision on interstate wine retail. Just a year after the US Supreme Court ruled that states cannot discriminate against out-of-state wine retailers, the justices are being asked to rule on the exact same issue again. Unfortunately, it's possible the Supreme Court won't want to wade back into liquor law again so soon, and consumers in Michigan and Ohio will be screwed – they won't be able to order wine from retail stores in other states.
